

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this letter to strongly recommend Anurag for any position involving app development. Anurag had the privilege of serving as an intern on the engineering team here at GagaHealth, where he made an exceptional impact not only in terms of deliverables but also as a team player.

During his internship, Anurag was specifically part of our App development team. He was required to work remotely and averaged no less than 30 hours per week. Despite the challenges associated with remote work, Anurag showed remarkable discipline and responsibility, ensuring that he was consistently productive and reachable during his scheduled hours.

Anurag displayed exceptional skills in coding, problem-solving, and creative thinking. He was able to quickly adapt to our stack and contribute to various projects, showing a level of understanding and skill that is rare for someone still in the early stages of their career. His contributions were often considered equivalent to those of some of our full-time junior developers.

Financially, Anurag's internship was compensated with a monthly stipend of INR 6,000, which he found to be reasonable and never let affect the quality or enthusiasm of his work. He understood the parameters of his internship, including the at-will employment condition, and conducted himself with utmost professionalism throughout his time with GagaHealth.

Although we did not offer social security benefits as part of the internship, Anurag was intrinsically motivated and committed to learning and growing. He was always eager to take on challenges and sought constructive feedback to improve further.

It should be stated clearly that Anurag's employment with GagaHealth was entirely at-will, and yet he proved himself to be an indispensable part of the team. Even though our professional relationship was not bound by any long-term contractual obligations, his contributions made a lasting impact on our projects.

I highly recommend Anurag for any app development position. He is not just a skilled developer but also a team player with a passion for continuous learning and growth. I am confident that he will exceed any expectations you might have for his role in your organization.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or would like further information.

Sincerely,

Dev Sharma
Human Resource
GAGAHEALTH